CUTS CONDEMNED

By Gareth Greene

THE Council has condemned Government spending cuts saying Hackney will be one of the hardest hit areas in the country.

Councillors backed an emergency motion at a meeting of Full Council on 24 November to enable Hackney to 'publicise its opposition to these unfair and unnecessary cuts'.

The motion also stated that the Council was 'outraged' by the scale of the cuts and supported the efforts of the Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, to lobby against them.

The move came after the Comprehensive Spending Review announced by the Conservative and Liberal Democrat coalition on 20 October, and a recent survey that showed Hackney would be one of the 10 worst hit local authorities in England.

The motion challenged

Government figures, which said reductions in funding would amount to seven per cent cuts per year, and stated it would be closer to 20 per cent in the next financial year (2011/12).

It continued: "This Council is outraged that the cuts are made worse in the most deprived boroughs such as Hackney by the removal of additional grants that tackled inequality, and is concerned about the impact of the cuts on vital public services and on the lives of our most vulnerable residents."

Mayor Pipe has been asking serious questions of the Government about how much money Hackney will have next year to run the borough.

And the motion added: "This Council supports the Mayor's lobbying of Government to restore the grants paid to inner city areas such as Hackney to tackle our significant areas of need."

All of Hackney's Labour councillors present at the meeting voted in favour of the motion. The three Liberal Democrat councillors abstained from voting for or against the motion, while the borough's four Conservative members did not vote at all.

In the wake of October's spending review, the Council quickly set out its stall as one of the first local authorities to start lobbying the Government to ensure fairer funding for its residents.

Hackney's link to the Olympic Park

The bridge over Ruckholt Road is 42 metres long and six metres wide

A BRIDGE that will link Hackney to the Olympic Park was lifted into place over the weekend of 20 and 21 November.

One of the largest cranes in Europe was used to hoist the 200 tonne bridge into position across Ruckholt Road. A temporary bridge was also lifted into place alongside it, to accommodate the high numbers of spectators. It will be removed after the Games, leaving the permanent bridge in place.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "It's great to see the new bridge in place. It will connect Hackney Marshes to the Olympic Park and make our green spaces much more accessible." Improvement works in Ruckholt Road itself have also been taking place, as part of a wider project to benefit drivers, cyclists and pedestrians in the area.

Spending cuts condemned

In advance of further figures set to be released as part of the Local Government Settlement in December, Hackney has called on the Government to clarify what the impact of spending cuts will be next year for the borough and its residents.

Mayor Pipe recently sent a letter to the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) asking for guidance on what the impact of the cuts would be and whether any further grants can be expected to make up the serious shortfall. While the DCLG acknowledged this letter, it did not answer any of the questions raised by Mayor Pipe.

He said: "From the figures released so far, it's becoming clear that the most deprived areas in the country will be hit hardest by these spending cuts. We will be doing our utmost to minimise the impact of the cuts on the borough and to push for the inequalities facing Hackney to be recognised when the Government announces our financial settlement for 2011/12."

As part of a capital-wide, cross-party campaign, the three political leaders from London Councils, including Mayor Pipe, also sent a joint letter to MPs outlining London's unique role in the nation's economy and how its people, businesses and infrastructure should be treated fairly in the finance settlement.

A recent survey carried out by the Special Interest Group of Municipal Authorities (SIGOMA) established that Hackney would be one of the 10 worst hit local authorities in the country. In addition, five of the authorities on that list were also the most deprived areas in England – this included Hackney.

What the Council spends money on

IN 2010/11, the Council plans to spend around £1.1 billion on services for residents. Here are some of the front line services it provides, including for some of the most vulnerable people:

- £135million on the most vulnerable residents: Helping them to live independently for as long as possible through 160 nursing homes placements; 700 residential placements; 64,000 hours of home care; and 250,000 hours of care provided via direct payments
- £16million on housing support: Advice and support to help tackle overcrowding and under-occupation; to help prevent homelessness and offer choices to vulnerable residents in need of housing
- £259million supporting children and young people through to training and work: Including more than 10,000 people in education; positive activities and youth clubs; the Youth Offending Team; care packages for disabled children; and the Building Schools for the Future Programme
- £92million on a cleaner, safer borough: Improving public safety by working with police and partners to tackle crime and anti-social behaviour; providing 6,000 food hygiene and consumer protection inspections; as well as 296 miles of daily street cleaning, maintenance of nearly 11,000 street lights and 161 miles of public roads
- £29million for a green, good place to live: Including £6million on recycling and £8.5million on household waste collections; maintenance of 62 parks and green spaces; investment in sports and leisure facilities like the new Hackney Marshes Centre; as well as eight libraries and a new library and archive for Dalston.

Period restoration

A historic mansion block on the corner of Darnley Road, E9, has been restored. Inset: the covered building while the restoration work took place

By
Colin Joseph

SCAFFOLDING has finally come down following the restoration of a Grade II-listed building in Mare Street.

Repairs on the mansion block on the corner of Darnley Road started in February, after the Council and English Heritage feared the building was falling into disrepair.

The extensive work, paid for by the owners of the property, include new roofing (with plain clay tiles to match the originals); the repair and rebuilding of the chimney stacks and side gable; stonework repairs, replacement of worn decorative gable pieces; brick repairs; re-pointing; plus window repair works and re-painting.

The Council helped push through the much-needed repair work, offering the owners and building contractors support and technical advice throughout.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "It is great that historic buildings in Hackney central have been restored. It is another success story for the Council and also good news for shoppers and residents in the area."

The building was originally added to the Department of Culture's statutory list for historic and architectural significance as Grade II-listed in 1974.

Other listed buildings in Mare Street include the Hackney Empire, the Town Hall and The New Lansdowne Club at number 195.

Message from the Mayor

Lobbying on Hackney's behalf

TWO years from now we will have celebrated the world's biggest event, the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

We will be doing our utmost to encourage investors to create new businesses and jobs and visitors to take part in Hackney's incredible cultural offer.

But unless things change dramatically we will also be into the second year of the biggest cuts imposed on local government in living memory.

In Hackney we've been ahead of the game in challenging the Government on this issue. I have lobbied hard on the borough's behalf and tackled the Secretary of State Eric Pickles in person on the level of funding that we expect to receive.

I have also galvanised support from colleagues in a similar position to ourselves and worked with the media to keep this issue in the spotlight.

To re-cap on the figures released so far by the Government: by front-loading the cuts in the next year, contrary to promises to spread them evenly over four years, and by removing money specifically designed to tackle the problems faced by the most socially and economically deprived residents in the borough, the Council will see its funding reduced by £50-60million in one year.

That is neither fair nor sensible. Hackney has an exemplary record in delivering efficiencies and savings in back office functions in order to push more money into improving front line services across the borough. Even a council with our record, however, can't make £50-60million of cuts in a year without affecting vital public services.

The local government press has reported that, since our public meeting, Mr Pickles approached the Treasury to see whether more funding could be found. It appeared that our argument had perhaps got through to one level of Government at least, although it was also reported that the Treasury turned the minister down. This isn't the good news we are looking for yet, but perhaps it's a start.

That's why I will continue to speak out for Hackney, and continue to challenge the Government on its financial support for communities such as ours.

Jules Pipe, elected Mayor of Hackney

No turbine on Hackney Marshes

A WIND turbine planned for Hackney Marshes will now not go ahead due to the difficult financial climate.

The decision follows a public consultation run by the Council in late 2009 when residents said they thought a turbine on the Marshes would be a good way of generating green electricity. Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "We're disappointed that the current economic situation has resulted in the banks making it more difficult for electricity generating companies to borrow the money they need to build such turbines. We will continue to explore options for generating green energy, and we hope to be able to revisit the idea of a turbine in the future."

Be a 2012 volunteer

THERE'S still time to grab the once-in-a-lifetime chance to be a volunteer during the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

With nearly 20,000 people London-wide already signed up, there are still places for 8,000 volunteers to welcome visitors from around the world in the summer of 2012. Teams of London Ambassadors will be based at 35 locations across the capital. The final date for residents to sign up is 31 December 2010, and enthusiastic volunteers will need to work for six consecutive days during the Games.

Getting into the swing of the New Age Games with (clockwise from above) soca aerobics, boccia, archery and board games. Guest speaker, late blooming triathlete Edwina Brocklesby, 67 (top right)

By
Caroline Howard

MORE than 150 Hackney residents turned out for the launch of the New Age Games at Kings Hall Leisure Centre.

Funded by the Council and run by its 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games' Unit, the event aims to introduce older people to leisure and sports activities and encourage them to live an independent, healthy lifestyle.

The games, which run until 2013, began on 18 November and are open to residents aged 50-plus.

They use a personal best system, meaning everyone competes on an equal basis, aiming to improve on their own top scores.

The activities – which included some Olympic and Paralympic sports – ranged from archery, badminton, and short tennis, to soca aerobics, swing ball and boccia. Board games were available for those who preferred to exercise the grey matter. Guest speaker, triathlete Edwina Brocklesby, 67, described her late introduction to sport. She was 50 before she first tried on a pair of running shoes realising that exercise was important. Just three years later she completed her first marathon, and she has now won triathlon gold in three different countries.

Energised by Edwina's story and a healthy lunch, many participants got to their feet for the last activity of the day, soca aerobics. A lively form of Caribbean dance, it saw people moving to the beats of classics such as 'Come Back Liza', and 'The Hokey Cokey' – and by the end, a conga train had formed.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic & Paralympic Games, said: "The launch was a great chance for older people to keep fit, try different sporting and leisure activities and make new friends."

Steve Allen, 63, from Homerton, was really excited to hear about the New Age Games: "I've had a wonderful time here today, the coaches have been great and everyone looks like they're having fun. I've met some new people and tried some new activities. I even took the opportunity to nip into the next room to use the gym after the warm up session."

Margaret Wise, 61, from Shoreditch was particularly excited because she had just recovered from an operation. She participated in javelin throwing, archery, boccia and short tennis. She said: "I've really enjoyed being out and meeting people and I'm looking forward to signing up for dance classes."

Recently retired Valerie John, 62, from Stoke Newington, said: "I'm really impressed by today's range of sports. I've never had time for leisure activity because I've always been busy working and bring up my children, looking after my husband and keeping house."

THE borough's school buildings came out on top at the Hackney Design Awards.

Clapton Girls' Technology College won two awards and the City

Academy in Homerton received an award for its 'calm and thought-provoking environment'. The Bridge Academy also picked up an award and was described by the judges as a 'thrilling building'.

Clapton Girls' won the new People's Choice Award, voted for by residents and visitors to the borough.

Head Teacher, Cheryl Day, said: "It's an outstanding school and the buildings are just brilliant. We are really thankful to architects Jestico+ Whiles, builders Mansell, and of course the Council and The Learning Trust."

The college was praised by the judging panel for refurbishing its existing buildings and constructing two new ones. The work took place as part of the ongoing £200million Building Schools for the Future Programme.

Other winners included Stoke Newington Town Hall, the Barn and Eco Garden at Dalston's Eastern Curve, and Bateman's Row in Shoreditch.

Mayor Jules Pipe said: "The Design Awards send a clear signal to designers and developers about what we expect for Hackney – and our standards and aspirations are extremely high.

"The awards demonstrate the Council's commitment to celebrating design excellence in the built environment."

The winning designs were chosen by a panel of six experts in the field of architecture and design. Judge, Tony Pidgley, Chairman of the Berkeley Group, said: "Projects like the Design Awards knit the community together and ensure buildings of integrity and quality are constructed."

Green strategy for the future

THE Council has set out its 15-year development plan for the borough, which it hopes will encourage businesses and residents to be more environmentally friendly.

The plans are highlighted in Hackney's new Core Strategy, which was adopted at a Full Council meeting on 24 November.

The strategy, which residents were consulted on in 2008 and 2009, will encourage the introduction of solar panel bus stops, as well as solar hot water systems. The strategy also pledges to make Hackney Central and Dalston more carbon friendly by encouraging energy self-sufficient buildings. Another aim is to attract green businesses by developing more locally-based energy networks. Other key objectives in the strategy include: encouraging sustainable investment; maximising legacy opportunities from the 2012 Games; tackling affordable housing needs; and attracting IT and design companies. Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and

2012 Olympic & Paralympic Games, said: "The Core Strategy will help to ensure that Hackney is a green, cosmopolitan part of London with safe, strong and cohesive communities."

Planning and consultation is under way for the third and final phase of Building Schools for the Future

Stoke Newington School has been refurbished under the BSF programme. Insets: former student Serren Ahmet, 16, in the dance studio

STOKE Newington School (SNS) marked the completion of a major refurbishment as part of Hackney's Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme with an event on 18 November.

The £200million investment – through central Government funding – aims to completely rebuild or refurbish every secondary and special school in Hackney by 2015.

SNS and Clapton Girls' Technology College both opened new facilities for the start of the school year in September.

Work at Hackney Free and Parochial School, the last of three BSF Phase 1 schools, is due for completion in 2011.

SNS teachers, students, parents and governors mingled with architects, project managers, technical advisors and contractors who worked together to transform the school over an 18-month period.

There was the chance to tour the building and see its new features, which include a striking new cafeteria; improved access linking all the rooms of the building without needing to go outside; a striking facade and entrance; and new lifts, ramps and all the other necessary features to make the school fully accessible to people with disabilities.

Earlier this year, the Government announced the closure of a number of BSF programmes, but allowed some schemes that had already made good progress, such as Hackney's, to continue.

Work has recently begun on Phase 2 at another three of the borough's schools. Our Lady's Convent High School is set to get a new building on its current site in Amhurst Park; Cardinal Pole Catholic School is to move to a new building in Morning Lane; and Haggerston School – originally designed by Trelick Tower architect Erno Goldfinger – is due for a complete renovation, plus a brand new building, increasing the school's capacity by 15 per cent.

Speaking at the SNS opening event, Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "I am very heartened that works have begun on our Phase 2 schools, ensuring that as many of Hackney's children in years to come have the best possible opportunities to achieve their potential."

Planning and consultation is under way for Phase 3, the final part of Hackney's BSF scheme. The Council wants to radically transform provision for Children with Special Education Needs (SEN). A time to reflect on sacrifice

Young and old paid respect to the endeavours of the armed forces past and present on Remembrance Sunday

By Gracia Douglas

MORE than 200 people turned out for the borough's annual Remembrance Sunday parade and service on 14 November.

Veterans, reservists, army, sea and air cadets were joined by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sally Mulready, local MPs and councillors.

A procession from Reading Lane – led by the band of the Jewish Boys' and Girls' Brigade – wound its way to the Cenotaph at St John at Hackney Church, in Lower Clapton Road. Veterans carried the flags of their service associations, including the Royal British Legion's Hackney branch; the Normandy Veterans Association; the Memorable Order of the Tin Hats; the Memorable Order of the Tin Hats Women's Association; and the Association of Jewish Ex-Servicemen and Women.

On arrival at St John, wreaths were laid to commemorate those who lost their lives during military service.

The church rector, Father Rob Wickham, then led a service. Speakers included Sgt Major Steve Williams, who had recently returned from serving in Afghanistan.

Following the service, the procession resumed through Lower Clapton Road and Mare Street culminating with a salute taken by the Queen's representative to

“It is important that we do not forget the sacrifices made by the people who lost their lives during the World Wars”

Hackney, Lt. Col. Morriss, and dignitaries at the Town Hall, where the Speaker laid another wreath of poppies at the War Memorial.

She said: “It is an honour to represent Hackney on Remembrance Sunday, as it remains terribly important that we do not forget the sacrifices made by the people who lost their lives during the World Wars. We must also remember all those who have fought in wars since and who are doing so today.

“I would particularly like to mention the men and women from Hackney, past and present, who have dedicated their lives to serving their country.”

Funds for commemorative visits

SECOND World War veterans can apply for funding to revisit places across the globe where they fought for their country.

Since April 2009, The Big Lottery Fund's Heroes Return 2 scheme has awarded over £655,000 to 885 veterans, widows, spouses and carers to go on emotional trips, home and abroad, to remember those that did not return from the battlefields of 1939-1945. Applicants can apply for a grant of between £150 and £5,500 depending on the number of people taking part and the destination. Trips must be taken before the end of the year. Grants can be awarded retrospectively until the scheme closes on 31 January 2011.

Stoke Newington resident Rosie Wolfenden began Tatty Devine with her colleague Harriet Vine after graduating from art college

By
Marcel Reinard

SIMON, this means more than anything to me," begs contestant Cher, on TV talent show The X Factor.

The camera zooms to her teary face, there's a long pause. An audience of more than 10million are looking at a close-up of a Perspex Tatty Devine 'name necklace'.

Free advertising for your flagship product doesn't get much better than that.

"It's been phenomenal, we've sold thousands. Before, people were only used to the gold ones from Argos," says Rosie Wolfenden, one half of Tatty Devine, on that Sex & the City-inspired signature necklace. With her business partner Harriet Vine, Rosie has overseen the transformation of the handmade accessories label from its beginnings as a Spitalfields market stall to one sold by 170 stockists worldwide.

"People always describe the style as quirky, eccentric, a little anarchic but also nostalgic and sweet," adds the Stoke Newington resident.

"And we like that the name is a bit of an oxymoron. We had a real nostalgia for old things. It's tatty, but there's something lovely about it," she adds.

In person, she is warm, fun and charismatic – a sharp contrast to the stereotype of aloof, po-faced fashionistas. Her favourite Hackney spots reflect this, as she describes Abney Park cemetery, she says: "I love walking in there, running in there, sitting in there, thinking in there, drawing in there. I just love it, and when it snowed it was phenomenal, like stepping back into the Victorian age."

Art college graduates Rosie and Harriet initially began making leather wristbands as a way of financing themselves as professional painters. Within weeks, national high street stores were clamouring to sell their wares and Vogue was requesting samples.

Rosie's eyes widen as she remembers: "Harvey Nichols were going crazy for the stuff, asking for a couple of hundred.

"We were like 'Oh. My. God. We never asked for this'. It was only a couple of months after college."

Over the last 10 years the business has gained popularity for its sophisticated pastiche products like moustache or eyeglass-shaped jewellery and brooches in the shape of wild animals. They've worked with artists Gilbert & George and opened a second shop in Covent Garden. A short walk from Stoke Newington to Shoreditch reveals Tatty Devine is being worn in abundance by Hackney's fashionable young things.

And yet. Asked if she has been tempted to cash-in and sell her brand, Rosie is surprisingly candid.

"It's a tricky one; ten years is an interesting place to be. In an ideal world, we'd like to get it going a bit more and potentially step back, but not sell out.

"Part of what makes Tatty Devine special is that items are handmade in London, but an investor would want to take production somewhere else. It's important to us to keep jobs local.

"That doesn't make very good business practice, because it does not maximise net profit and finding someone who wants to buy into that is quite difficult.

"The best route we can do is take it to the highest level of success that we can achieve with our business model, which is still a pretty good goal I think," she says.

The duo's hard work has earned Rosie a nomination at the prestigious NatWest everywoman awards.

"I haven't felt like this since I had to wait for my A-level results, it's really extraordinary. I think I have as good a chance as any. We might not make a million pounds overnight, but that's never been our goal, it's much more to make something good that people enjoy and believe in," she says.

See Carrie, all that glitters is not gold. It can be wood, acrylic and plastic too.

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I missed the Council's autumn compost give away this year, but I still need some to prepare my garden for next year. I use the kitchen waste collection service, so I deserve some!

A: The Council has collected an average of 225 tonnes of kitchen and garden waste every month from Hackney's households this year. Over the last few months, the borough has seen an enormous interest in 'growing your own' and more residents are requesting compost for their gardens or community spaces.

The recycling team holds compost events throughout the year, and in 2010 gave away 15,000 kilograms to residents willing to take as much as they could carry. The next event will be in spring 2011 – but why not add your name to the mailing list using the contact details below. Alternatively, start making your own compost.

The Council discourages fly-tipping (above) by offering a free service to remove bulky items

Lose the incredible bulk

All stories by
Sarah Menz

THE Council is urging residents who need to get rid of large items to take advantage of its free bulky waste collections.

The free service is available to all residents, and aims to prevent illegal dumping or 'fly-tipping'.

The Council will collect up to five items – such as mattresses, beds, sofas, cookers and fridges – from every household, up to four times a year.

In recent months the Council has received several complaints about people dumping bulky waste on estates.

Dealing with the problem can cost millions every year – and this falls on the taxpayer.

Fly-tipping also adversely affects the environment, threatening the health of rivers and recreation areas, and even reducing property prices in affected areas.

Residents who hire builders, gardeners or scrap metal merchants to take materials away from their home should be sure that this is appropriately disposed of.

If waste is illegally dumped, the responsibility lies with the owner, who is liable for a fine.

Dumping waste material without permission is a criminal offence that can carry a fine of up to £50,000, or even a prison sentence.

Rivka Cocker's winning poster encourages residents to reduce the waste they produce. Right: Rivka with her poster

Artful reminder on waste

A STOKE Newington School student's artwork is currently displayed on buses across the borough.

Rivka Cocker won a poster competition run by the North London Waste Authority (NLWA) in partnership with the Council. The competition was aimed at raising awareness of waste prevention among young people and encouraging North London residents to reduce the amount of waste they produce.

Rivka said: "I read about clothes swapping and was inspired to try it out. It's about being green and stopping landfill when you can reuse instead.

"I heard about the poster competition and the two things clicked together. I used some photos I'd taken at the clothes swap to put together my winning poster. It was such a surprise to win and I hope people listen to my message and have a go themselves."

The winning posters from each of the seven local authorities that form the NLWA are on display on the outside and inside of buses to help promote waste prevention.

Feed our feathered friends this winter

IN harsh winters, birds such as song thrushes, wrens, blackbirds and robins flock to gardens across the borough in search of food.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB), is urging residents to match last year's great efforts to save urban wildlife, by putting out food for hungry birds as temperatures drop.

By starting to put food out now, we can help wildlife prepare for the tougher times ahead. Keep feeders and bird tables topped up with calorie rich foods like mixed seeds, nyjer seed and peanuts, as well as kitchen scraps like cereal or oats, grated unsalted mild cheese, or any leftover cooked rice or pasta.

The RSPB has a special offer on some bags of bird seed, all available from reserves and its online shop. For further information, visit: www.rspb.org.uk/feedthebirds

TOP BIRD FEEDING RECIPE

CRUMBLE PASTRY MAGGOTS

Don't worry; there are no real maggots in this recipe. Put 150g of flour in a bowl and mix in 50g of margarine with your fingers. You will find the dry mixture will rub into little bits that look like maggots. Sprinkle the maggots on the ground, bird table and among bushes or flowerbeds. You could attract robins, tits and blackcaps on the bird table; and dunnocks, wrens, or wagtails on the ground.

Find a green giant

DO you know someone in the community who has gone that extra mile to be kind to the environment? Nominations are now open for the first People and Environment Achievement (PEA) Awards, which aim to recognise the country's green heroes. Launched to celebrate practical, engaging initiatives, the PEA Awards recognise excellence in 10 categories: arts and music; best energy saving idea; best earth saving idea; business person of the year community award; campaigner of the year; entrepreneur of the year; public-sector award; sustainability in sport; and responsible travel. Tony Juniper, National Geographic's Green Editor and the judging panel chair, is urging people to help recognise those working hardest for a greener future by making a nomination. He said: "We probably all know someone who fits into one of these categories, so please nominate them to let them know that we do appreciate everything they do for our society." The PEA awards will be hosted by television presenter Liz Bonnin on 2 March 2011 at the National Geographic store in Regent Street. Nominations close on 31 December. Woodberry Down pupils learn how to read by getting used to the sounds each part of a word makes

Marcel Reinard

WOODBERRY Down Primary School is among the best in the country at getting children reading by six, according to a recent Ofsted report.

The Government watchdog praised 12 schools across England that 'teach virtually all their children to read, regardless of their social and economic background, ethnicity, language spoken at home, special needs and disability.'

Ofsted's 'Reading by Six, how the best schools do it' report praised the N4 school for a step by step approach to teaching reading, writing and spelling through phonics – the connection between sounds and letters.

Woodberry Down also frequently assesses pupils to gauge their ability and keep abreast of individual difficulties, the report stated.

Head of School, Penny Smith, believes this method has helped raise Woodberry Down above the national average for Key Stage 1 and 2.

She said: "This method has been used for seven years. Phonics teaching focuses on sounds, taking in each letter of a word individually and then blending them together. "Words aren't learnt straight away, it's about getting used to the noises each part makes.

"The benefit of the structured system we use is that the same teaching style is used across year groups. Children become used to a consistent way of learning, even if they have a different teacher."

Ofsted found that inspection evidence and research showed that the critical age when children learn to be good readers and writers is between three and seven.

Hidden talent

A PROJECT that features designs created by Hackney young people has won a Lord Mayor's Dragon Award.

Hidden Art picked up the Community Partners honour for its work with City firm UBS.

Its current project, Hidden Art Select Kids, is a competition which challenges the borough's pupils to create designs for commercial items.

This year's winner was Lola-Jan Creese from the Bridge Academy. Her football inspired design was made into a bag, now on sale through Hidden Art, by designer Ella Doran.

The not-for-profit organisation said the project allows pupils to experience the design process first-

Winner Lola-Jan Creese, centre, with Hidden Art Select designers

News in brief

Algerian visit

TEACHERS from Algeria have visited Hackney schools to gain a greater understanding of UK culture. From 8 to 11 November education professionals from the country met with a cluster of borough schools – including Our Lady and St Joseph's (pictured) – which they will be working with as part of the British Council's Connecting Classrooms programme. The activities aim to broaden pupils' and teachers' international horizons, increase classroom motivation and prepare young people for life in a global society.

Loans to student firms

A CHARITY is offering interest free start-up business loans of up to £100 to Skinners' and Yesodey Hatorah Secondary School pupils.

MyBnk specialises in teaching students about personal and business finance, and its micro-bank project could see a new generation of high-flying chief executives emerge from Hackney schools.

The charity also trains young people to become informed consumers of financial services and learn how to earn, manage, save and borrow money.

During MyBnk Enterprise Week, from 15 to 19 November, students in six Hackney schools searched for the best lending deals from high street banks, debated financial ethics, and discovered what big investors do with money.

SOME of the mind-boggling phenomena behind the natural world were explained during an Institute of Physics roadshow at Clapton Girls' Technology College.

Through a series of experiments, students learnt the science of everyday occurrences, such as why the sky is blue, the sun hot, and stars shine.

The 'Ever Wondered Why?' roadshow took place on 18 November. The aim was to encourage students to get excited about physics, and learn about related career paths. Sixth former, Victoria Kehinde said: "I felt like I was in Year 7 again, with the amazement and wonder of it all."

The Cradle Will Rock

Until 17 Dec

Written in 1937 by Marc Blitzstein, The Cradle Will Rock was originally directed by Orson Welles, and went down in theatrical history as a musical that defeated an attempted ban by the US Federal authorities. Arcola Theatre's Founder and Artistic director Mehmet Ergen directs this final Arcola Street production. Two fund-raising appeal evenings take place on 9 and 17 December to help support Arcola's conversion to the new art space, secured with help from the Council, in nearby Ashwin Street. The evenings include tickets to The Cradle Will Rock, pre-show appetisers, post show drinks with the cast, an opportunity to win prizes and recognition as an Arcola Theatre supporter on the wall of the new building. The new premises are set to open in the New Year and will feature a range of eco-measures, including low-energy and natural lighting and on-site renewable power. Tickets for the show £16/£10 (appeal evenings £65). For more details, call 020 7503 1646; or visit www.arcolatheatre.com

La Chiva Gantiva

20 Nov, Rich Mix, 35-47 Bethnal Green Road, E1

Looking across the sweat-streaked crowd pogo-ing to Afro-Colombian funk with some attempting salsa with widely differing success, a band all wearing Lucha Libre masks and a lead singer with a flamingo on his head, you wouldn't think it was a cold London in November. A sensational La Chiva Gantiva performance brought the spirit of their native Colombia – via Belgium, where they formed – to Rich Mix, with intense exuberance much needed on a two degrees winter's night. For a band to get a crowd moving so vibrantly and infectiously from the very first note is quite rare but logical by playing familiar electric funk and rock guitar licks, with more traditional drum dancing music found in South America. Bizarre touches – impromptu breakdancing in the audience, the singer diving into the crowd spinning that bird hat – got hearts pounding further. And the band seemed to enjoy being on stage as much as the audience, howling phrases in both Spanish and English in a show that concluded with two grateful encores. They even managed to get a usually reserved UK audience to synchronise dance across the floor; a high impossible feat from an extraordinary band.

Successful quest

The two groups of young people together in Cape Town. Inset: Cardinal Pole student Patricia working on a mural

By
Kate Gibney

AFTER 10 months of hard work and fund-raising, nine young people from charity Hackney Quest set off for South Africa.

During their trip to Cape Town, they joined forces with other youngsters from local Trafalgar High School, and with Stars of Tomorrow, a charity that works with young people in South Africa and funds students' school places.

The visitors, who began their nine-day adventure on 20 October, ran workshops to encourage both groups to learn about different cultures and share the challenges and opportunities for young people in their areas. This included a session on youth and sexual health.

There were also chances for sightseeing and to experience traditional African food and culture.

The groups made a documentary about their everyday lives, which explored what it is like to be a young person in their respective countries.

The Hackney young people also spent two days in the Langa township where they volunteered at the Ikhaya Labantu homeless shelter.

The group raised over £12,000 through a range of events – including a midnight bike ride to South Africa House in Trafalgar Square – towards flights and accommodation, as well as covering the cost of activities, meals and transport for the Cape Town pupils.

Keeley Williams, Hackney Quest Youth Participation and Volunteer Manager, said: "Both groups come from diverse backgrounds and have overcome many obstacles."

and friendly, which was amazing. I felt excited because I knew I was in a fantastic country with fantastic people. I didn't think that there would be many similarities between us, but I have now realised that there are probably more similarities than differences.

I hope they got a lot out of our workshops, and judging by their positive response and team effort, I'm sure they have. Although the project is complete, I don't think that we should let our project morale go. Maybe we can modify our workshops to suit young people over here and hopefully run them with other youth club youths, or potentially, in schools."

shelter and learn a lot more about the segregation that took place. I believe I managed to fulfill my goals. The people were very happy Patricia, 15, from Cardinal Pole Catholic School was part of the Hackney group.

"As a team, we all worked well together. I think this is mainly because we had a friendly vibe – nobody felt excluded from the group or felt they couldn't talk within the group. For example, during one of the activities – the human knot game – everyone was literally yelling their plan at each other, with no hesitation whatsoever. Initially, I wanted to make new friends and I wanted to put to use all the knowledge I gained during the HIV/Aids sessions over here. I also wanted to make a contribution to the homeless

Nepal visit was just oar-some

A GROUP of young people from Laburnum Boat Club in Hackney have returned from an amazing visit to Nepal. The group raised funds for the expedition in a number of ways, including a gruelling 47-mile sponsored kayak around London. Support also came from the Council's Youth Opportunities Fund. The expedition, which took a year to plan, aimed to provide personal and social development for all involved, and included taking part in a community project which saw the group build four toilets in a remote hill-side village. The group also kayaked on the Kali Gandaki, the holiest river in Nepal. Kurtis Knibbs, 14, said: "I really enjoyed working with the children, and it made me think how lucky we are."

Rowan Brown, 16, added: "I had a great experience and wished we could have helped out more and had longer in Nepal."

The group is now putting together a presentation that it will take to other youth clubs and schools, to hopefully inspire other young people. Jim Armstrong, Laburnum Boat Club coordinator, said: "This has been an amazing opportunity for a group of local young people to broaden their horizons."

Support champions

An awareness activity during a World Mental Health Day event held at Hackney Community College

By
Marcel Reinard

HACKNEY Community College (HCC) has been praised for its work championing educational support for people with mental health difficulties.

The Association of Colleges (AOC) announced it has given the HCC's Mental Health Education and Employment Service a prestigious Beacon Award for 'widening participation'.

The service, established in 1997, was described as 'one of a kind in the country' and a 'beacon of best practice'. It challenges mental health stigmas; provides help for people to achieve in and progress from further education; offers expertise to people referred by mental health professionals; and gives specialist support on mainstream courses.

The award recognises more than 12 years of partnership working with organisations including NHS City & Hackney, East London NHS Foundation Trust, and voluntary groups. The award was announced at the AOC's national conference on 17 November. Martin Doel, the Association of Colleges' Chief Executive, said: "This is a superb example of how colleges put extra effort into helping very diverse elements of society, including those who need more help accessing education than others. Congratulations to HCC on an innovative, inspiring scheme."

Ian Ashman, HCC principal, added: "I'm so proud of the team and their achievement. It recognises the professionalism, consistent high standards and hard work that support the clients."

The cost of a funeral can be an added worry following the loss of a loved one

Support to plan debt-free funeral

A NEW service is offering free support to help bereaved people on low incomes arrange a funeral without getting into debt.

Run by East London charity Quaker Social Action (QSA), 'Down To Earth' is also recruiting volunteer mentors to support people through the process of arranging a funeral for a loved one.

Volunteer Joanne has lived in Hackney for 25 years. She became interested in end of life care when her friend passed away at St Joseph's Hospice, which is working on the scheme in partnership with QSA.

She has completed a four-week training course and will soon be supporting her first clients. She said: "I thought it was a really good idea to help out people in that situation. I've known people without much money who had to organise a funeral, and they can get into a lot of debt, and stress too."

Users of the service will be allocated a mentor, and can get advice over the phone and from a funeral resource pack – a guide to creating a meaningful, affordable send-off.

International Day for Disabled People

A GROUP of disabled residents has found a creative way to illustrate some of the problems they face in day-to-day life.

Members of Disability BackUp, a forum for local disabled people which is funded by the Council, have invited councillors, MPs and London Assembly members to join them for a series of walks to highlight service access issues in the borough.

Disabled residents can join a series of events in Hackney on 3 December

The three trails are from the Narrowway to Mare Street; Balance Road to Well Street; and Church Street to Belfast Road. Attendees can take buses between stop-off points. Members have also recorded their views about some of the issues they face when accessing food as part of an online radio show to be aired on the day at:

www.reelrebelsradio.com

An evening party at City Edge, E8, will conclude the day's events, allowing people to share feedback, listen to the radio show, and celebrate the achievements of disabled residents.

All the events are organised as part of the International Day for Disabled People on 3 December.

On the home front

By Siân Mogridge, Archivist

THIS is the second in a series of articles to mark the 70th anniversary of the Blitz.

The first explored the sustained Nazi bombing raids which London suffered from September 1940 to May 1941. Here, Archives staff look at the other ways life changed dramatically for Hackney residents during the Second World War.

The blackout was strictly enforced and barrage balloons were tethered above open spaces such as Hackney Marshes. Some buildings, such as Stoke Newington Town Hall, were given coats of camouflage paint; there was a large anti-aircraft battery in Victoria Park; and the night sky was crisscrossed with searchlights to spot enemy aircraft.

The blackout took its own casualties – a quick glance through local newspapers of the time shows a marked increase in road accidents at night. The bottoms of street lamps and post boxes were painted white to help drivers and pedestrians, but this was not a substitute for proper lighting.

Civil Defence required plenty of people, and fire-watching for one night a week became compulsory for all men who worked less than 60 hours a week, and women who worked less than 55 hours, unless they already had other Civil Defence or Home Guard duties. On top of disturbed nights caused by air raids, people must have been very short on sleep. Food, clothes, furniture and petrol were all rationed. This wasn't unexpected, since rationing had been in place during the First World War. However, systems did not always run smoothly. Clothing rationing was introduced at the beginning of June 1940, and the records of local match makers Bryant & May show it promptly got in touch with the Board of Trade to find out about the protective overalls that it provided for its workers – 'surely employees wouldn't have to spend their precious coupons on this essential equipment?' they asked.

The conflict had a major impact on local business, with many producing materials for the war effort.

Sindall & Co, a trimming manufacturer based in Middleton Road, made lanyards for revolvers and wove khaki materials. Paint manufacturer Lewis Berger & Sons, in Morning Lane, made camouflage colours and protective paint for military equipment.

Many non-essential goods just weren't made. Most businesses suffered from a shortage of labour due to the number of men serving in the armed forces, and a shortage of materials due to the lack of imports. As a result, the number of women in work rose, and so Hackney's first day nursery opened in April 1942 at the French Hospital by Victoria Park.

People pulled together. Some carried out Civil Defence work, others joined the Home Guard, the Women's Voluntary Service, or other organisations. Projects like the Londoners Meals Service used volunteers to cook cheap hot meals for anyone who could not provide their own.

But the hardships and the changes to people's lives must be remembered as well as the community spirit, or, perhaps, in order to appreciate it better.

ADOPTION STATEMENT, 25 November 2010

Hackney Core Strategy Development Plan Document

This adoption statement has been prepared in accordance with Regulations 24(2)(4) and 36 of the Town and Country Planning (Local Development) (England) Regulations 2004 and Amendment Regulations 2008, and gives notice that the London Borough of Hackney adopted its

Core Strategy Development Plan Document (DPD) on 24 November 2010

The Core Strategy DPD forms part of the Hackney Local Development Framework (LDF) which will replace, in part, the Hackney Unitary Development Plan 1995. The LDF forms the basis for decisions on land use and spatial planning affecting Hackney for the period until 2025, and will comprise a number of DPDs.

The Core Strategy sets out the spatial structure of the Borough, and seeks to support and deliver the overall vision and objectives for the Borough as established in the Sustainable Community Strategy and other similar related documents. The Core Strategy DPD covers the whole Borough area and is the first such DPD to be adopted by the Council.

The Core Strategy was considered by independent Inspector, Mr Michael

J Hetherington BSC(Hons) MA MRTPI, at an Examination in Public held between 20 to 28 July 2010. The Inspector found the Core Strategy to be sound subject to a number of changes - all changes being based on changes put forward by Hackney Council in response to points raised and suggestions discussed during the public examination.

The Inspector's Report, with its recommendations, was published on 27 September 2010. The adopted Core Strategy incorporates the binding recommendations of the Inspector.

Any person aggrieved by the Core Strategy may make an application to the High Court under section 113 of the Planning & Compulsory Purchase Act 2004. Any challenge must be made on the grounds that:

- the document is not within the appropriate power;
- a procedural requirement has not been complied with.

Any such application must be made promptly and in any event not later than 6 weeks after the date on which the Core Strategy was adopted, i.e 6 January 2011.

Printed copies of the Core Strategy DPD, Proposals Map changes and Sustainability Appraisal are available at: Hackney Service Centre 1 Hillman Street, E8 1DY (new building rear of Hackney Town Hall, Mare Street, London E8). Ask for the Planning desk.

Electronic copies of all documents are available on the Council's website:
www.hackney.gov.uk/core-strategy

Getting young people excited about 2012

Beth Bolitho, Youth Service Project Officer

BETH is part of the Council's Voluntary and Community Sector Team. She manages third-sector partnership projects that target hard-to-reach young people in the borough. Her current portfolio includes work with Hackney Volunteer Police Cadets and the London Gypsy Traveller unit. She is also working on an innovative project designed to get young people excited about the 2012 Olympic Games through the production of an interactive computer game – Hackney Sprint. The project has the backing of Hackney's 2012 Youth Ambassadors, who have been involved since the early stages and will continue to play a part in post-production. Beth says: "The Ambassadors will be integral to the success of the game – we are depending on them to get young people buzzing about the Games in the lead up to 2012."

Providing opportunities

By
Colin Joseph

THE Council's Voluntary and Community Sector (VCS) Team manages partnership projects that provide positive activities for young people.

The team works with colleagues and voluntary sector organisations in the borough to understand how the services they provide can contribute to the well-being of young people in Hackney.

Through regular quality assurance and monitoring visits, the team aims to ensure high standards.

It also offers support to third sector organisations looking to enhance and expand their services for young people.

Its Youth Provider Network meetings promote information sharing about funding opportunities, training, and policy developments among a wide-range of stakeholders, and help different organisations to work together. The team aims to champion

Hackney's 2012 Youth Ambassadors have been involved in the Hackney Sprint project from the outset. The VCS Team aims to champion young people and give them a voice

Hackney's young people and advocate on their behalf. It also develops targets so that the Council delivers programmes for young people that are as effective as possible.

Among the projects the team manages is the Young Hackney Volunteers Programme, which is due to be launched on 30 November.

Charity CSV has been commissioned by the Council's Youth Service to engage some 500 young people in volunteering opportunities between now and the end of March 2012.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Adrian Baggs, 46, had been unemployed for two years when he started work at the Hoxton Apprentice. He had wanted to become a chef for a long time, and after making a successful application, Adrian discovered he could make his ambition a reality. His passion for food is what led him to seek professional training, which is now giving him great satisfaction and enjoyment as he finds his feet in the hospitality industry. He said: "The Hoxton Apprentice has given me the opportunity to realise my dream. I love what I'm doing and I'm enjoying every minute in the kitchen."

Smoked haddock with beurre blanc sauce

Serves 6

Preparation time
30minsCooking time
1hr

Ingredients

- 6 fresh non-dyed smoked haddock fillets
- 6 eggs
- 36 medium-sized new potatoes
- 100g unsalted butter
- 50g finely chopped chives
- Enough milk to cover the fish
- 6 sprigs chervil, to garnish
- Salt and freshly ground white pepper

For the sauce

- 200ml white wine
- 1 shallot finely chopped
- A few fresh flat-leaf parsley leaves
- 1 bay leaf
- 4 black peppercorns
- 170g unsalted butter, diced

Method

For the sauce:

- Put wine, shallot, herbs and peppercorns in a pan and bring to the boil. Simmer for 3-4 mins or until reduced by half
- Sieve mixture into a metal bowl. Place bowl over a pan of water on very low heat. Add diced butter cubes to the bowl one at a time while whisking until the butter has melted

- Whisk occasionally over pan until everything else is ready. If left too long, sauce may split

For smoked haddock:

- Boil potatoes in salted water until tender. Drain and return to pan. Add butter, season to taste, then crush the potatoes lightly with the back of a fork, breaking them up slightly and incorporating the butter. Add chives and put aside somewhere warm
- Boil water in three quarters full large pan. Break eggs gently into a large bowl
- Put smoked haddock in a shallow pan and cover with milk. Gently poach for about 5 mins until the fish just begins to flake. Drain and put aside to keep warm
- Carefully pour eggs into the boiling water. Return to boil, simmer for 2 mins and remove with a slotted spoon
- To serve, spoon a pile of crushed potatoes into the centre of each plate. Place a piece of haddock and then an egg on top. Spoon the beurre blanc sauce over the eggs. Garnish with fresh sprigs of chervil

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain an NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people. If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Jeanita Snowdon on: 020 7749 2800.

All manor of changes

THERE'S still time to have your say on the Council's proposals to shape the Manor House area over the next 15 years.

This includes the area around the Tube station, at the junction of Seven Sisters Road and Green Lanes. Residents have until 6 December to respond to the draft Manor House Area Action Plan (Phase 1) Masterplan consultation.

The masterplan was informed by conversations with the public and a range of local businesses, and other stakeholders, and has helped identify a need for a wider variety of shops; better use of old buildings; better access to Finsbury Park and West Reservoir; and a cleaner and safer street environment.

If approved, the draft Area Action Plan will set out planning and design policies for the area; help guide future development; attract investment; and improve the public realm for everyone.

Take part online at:

www.hackney.gov.uk/manor-house-aap.htm

For a paper survey call: 020 8356 8047; or, using Manor House as the subject, e-mail: strategic.delivery@hackney.gov.uk
